Kandy Esala Perahera

The oldest culture pageant of Asia

Will Start on 31.07.2011

Considered one of the most colourful religious pageants in Asia, Kandy's ten-day Esala Perahera is one of Sri Lanka's most spectacular festivals.

The perahera (procession) is held to honour the sacred tooth enshrined in the Temple of the Sacred Tooth Relic.

According to Sri Lankan legends, when the Buddha died, his body was cremated in a sandalwood pyre in India and his left canine tooth was retrieved from the funeral pyre. A belief grew that whoever possessed the Sacred Tooth Relic had a divine right to rule that land; wars were fought to take possession of the relic.

After many wars and many deaths, a royal couple disguised themselves and set sail to Sri Lanka with the relic hidden as a hair ornament. It is claimed that Sri Lanka was chosen as the new home for the tooth relic because the Lord Buddha had declared that his religion would be safe there (in Sri Lanka) for 2,500 years. At the time of the royal couple's landing, the king of Sri Lanka, King Kirti Sri Megavanna, was overjoyed that the Sacred Tooth Relic was in Sri Lanka and received it with great veneration.

As time went on, the land was threatened with foreign invasions and the location of the kingdom was moved from city to city. Upon each change of capital, a new palace was built to enshrine the Relic; finally it was bought to Kandy, where it is at present, in the Temple of the Tooth.

The ten days festival begins on 31 July with the Kap Tree Planting Ceremony, during which cuttings from an Esala tree (Jak or Rukattana are accepted), are planted in the four devales. The perahera actually comprises five separate processions, which follow one another around the city streets: one from the Temple of the Tooth and one from each of the other four devales.

The perahera is traditionally held over the last nine days of the lunar month of Esala, finishing on Nikini Poya day. This usually falls during late July or early August though the exact dates vary according to the vagaries of the lunar calendar; the authorities sometimes opt for slightly different dates depending on practical and astrological considerations. Filled with brilliant colours, dances and traditions, the essence of Sri Lankan history is captured in the annual Kandy Esala Perahera.

The High Commission of Sri Lanka in Pakistan cordially invites Pakistan Friends to visit Kandy, Sri Lanka to see the Historical Kandy Perahera in July 2011. For details of hotel bookings, visas and flight information, please send a request to www.slhcpakistan.org or email to srilanka@dsl.net.pk
