The High Commission of Sri Lanka in the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

President Mahinda Rajapaksa re-elected

The President of Sri Lanka, Mahinda Rajapaksa trounced the Opposition consensus candidate and former Army Chief, retired General Sarath Fonseka, by a huge margin of over 17 per cent.

As per the final result notified on the official web site of the island-nation's Department of Elections, Mr. Rajapaksa obtained 6,015,934 votes (57.88 per cent) and Gen. Fonseka 4,173,185 votes (40.15 per cent).

The margin of victory proved the predictions of a close contest wrong. District-wise results showed that Mr. Rajapaksa retained his enormous rural base and the impact of the commander-turned-politician was confined to urban pockets, barring Colombo district.

A beaming Rajapaksa in his first informal interaction with the media, outside the office of the Elections Commission, said during his second stint he would strive for development and reconciliation among the majority Sinhalese and the minority Tamil and Muslim communities as promised in his manifesto.

The Ceylon junglefowl - An endemic bird of Sri Lanka

Common Names: The Ceylon junglefowl (E) Walikukula (S), Kattu-koli (T)
 Scientific Name: Gallus lafayettii
 Status: Endemic / National bird of Sri Lanka.

The Ceylon junglefowl is distributed throughout Sri Lanka, wherever jungle or dense scrub of any extent is to be found, but it is nowadays common only in the wilder parts of the dry zone. It spends its life in the forest or its outskirts, never venturing from cover. However, in wet weather, it likes to frequent open places, such as roadsides or glades, for the purpose of feeding free from drippings from the trees. Most of the daylight hours are spent on the ground. In the evening, they fly up into the trees to roost - usually singly, but sometimes in pairs or family parties. Unless disturbed they will use the same perch for a considerable period of time.

The Junglefowl feeds on grain, weed-seeds, berries, various succulent leaves and buds and a large proportion of small animals, such as crickets, centipedes and termites: the latter form the main food of the chicks.

The main breeding season of the Jungle fowl is in the first quarter of each year, but often a second clutch is laid in August-September, and breeding may go on throughout the year. The chicks are very precocious, learning to scratch as soon as they leave the nest. However, they instantly scatter and hide at the mother's alarm call.
